RE: Recommendation –
 October 12, 2020

I have had _____ in my IB Psychology class for the past 2 years. _____ was also in my AP Psychology course 2 years ago; and I served as _____ Extended Essay mentor for the past year.

In my classroom, _____ stands out specifically for _____ thoroughness and _____ caring nature. Firstly, _____ thoroughness, or attention to detail, is something for which I greatly admire _____. _____ has such great attention to detail and commitment to complete every task or assignment to completion. _____ Type-A personality drives _____ to ensure that whenever _____ commits _____ to do something, _____ will leave no stone unturned in getting it done. When it comes to schoolwork I never question if _____ will turn something in on time, or will have followed the given guidelines or rubric. _____ is meticulous to detail, and respectful of directions and timelines. _____ has no hesitation to ask for clarification, advice, or assistance when needed. _____ will do whatever necessary to complete what is placed in front of _____ to the fullest extent. An example of this is from my time working with _____ as _____ Extended Essay mentor. The Extended Essay is an in-depth research paper that all IB candidates must complete. As _____ mentor we had frequent meetings throughout the process as I helped _____ with research, outlining, and then editing. _____ was one of many students I mentored this year and have mentored in the past. While other students would show up to meetings empty-handed or with the expectation that I would fully guide the meeting; _____ would show up with highlighted, color coded drafts. _____ would show up with a list of questions. _____ was always prepared and ready to get the job done. _____ wanted to use this time wisely and soak up every ounce of guidance _____ could. _____ took every piece of advice I gave and applied it and never hesitated to discuss it or ask for more explanation when _____ needed it. I would happily work with _____ again on any project and couldn't recommend _____ more purely because of _____ work ethic and determination displayed in this process.

The second thing that comes to mind about _____ is her caring nature. I know this doesn't necessarily speak to _____ academic abilities, but I think it is important to note to understand how truly well-rounded _____ is. As I mentioned earlier, _____ is extremely Type-A which sometimes comes with a "bulldozer" mentality, just running through obstacles and over others to get what they need done. _____ however, is the opposite. _____ is always so kind and so generous to _____ peers and teachers. _____ has shown me such gratitude and respect over the time I've known _____. I would trust _____ to be placed in any group setting because I know _____ would treat all others with the respect and compassion they need.

500 words

Write about a time you failed at something. How did that failure affect you and what did you learn from it?

Failure can be defined in various ways; the standard definition being "lack of success." Yet, in my mind, failure is not recognizing what is important or refusing to acknowledge wrongdoings. Failure presents itself every day in many forms. One instance that comes to mind when I think about failure is my neglect to enjoy the small moments and value the time I had left with my friends.

While I understand that this is not the conventional example of failure and it took me a long period of time to acknowledge it, it caused a monumental realization that has completely changed my view on life. When many individuals think of failure, they might remember receiving a failing grade, losing a sports game, or even not making a team; but my biggest regret or failure that has come to the surface is not being fully focused on my relationships with the friends that I will soon leave. Up until a few months ago, but most prominently the past two months, I have come to the realization that I will no longer see my friends every day like I have for the past four years. It had become routine to go to school, talk with my friends and classmates, go home, do homework, then do it all over again. My failure to realize that these relationships mean more to me than anything cost me valuable time with my friends before we all move away for college.

When I finally came to my senses and acknowledged the approaching inevitable, when we would all disperse to different states and universities, I began living in the moment. I had always been so hyper-focused on school and been nervous to go out on school nights or participate in activities if something was due, so I made my friends a large priority and something amazing happened...I noticed that I can have fun and make memories without my grades suffering. Even through final exams, I made a point to create lasting memories. I went on late night car rides, baked cupcakes for my class with my friends, dressed up for senior week, went to the beach, and just enjoyed my friends' company. Not only that, I went to prom...my first high school dance. I made sure to push myself out of my comfort zone and I will forever be grateful that I did. All throughout this time, I began carrying a disposable camera to capture the everyday moments, and I will never stop recommending this until the day I die. I will cherish my memories and the photos I have forever.

Because of my realization, my senior year has been my favorite out of high school and I know that I will carry these memories with me for the rest of my life. I will never again experience the failure of not living in the present and just enjoying the small moments with people, because you never know when those moments must come to an end.
